5 Ways to Use LiveSafe to Prevent and Address Suspicious Activity

1

Anonymous Reporting

Students, faculty, and staff can submit reports of suspicious activity in or around your campus.

Use Case: If a student notices someone unfamiliar trying to enter their dorm or apartment building, they can submit a tip, anonymously if desired.

2

Broadcast Messages

When you need to enlist the help of your community, send a Broadcast Message with some basic information.

Use Case: Send out a known vehicle or individual description and ask community members to be on the lookout.

3

Group-Specific Mass Notifications

If suspicious activity is a concern on only a specific part of your campus, send a message to a relevant user group.

Use Case: If there is a suspicious package near one building on your campus, groups can alert only safety personnel and those who live or work in the affected area.

SafeWalk

Users can alert friends or family if they don't reach their destination on time, or even to virtually accompany them.

Use Case: If a student feels unsafe, SafeWalk can help them ensure that they arrive at their destination safely.

5

Resources

Upload or link general or institution-specific information about suspicious activity scenarios and response strategies to the "Resources" section of the app.

Use Case: If unsure about how to identify or respond to suspicious activity, community members can access guidance.
