

Responding to Production Line Safety Concerns

Manufacturing

The Situation

A manufacturing client recognized that its workplace was presenting hazards to production employees and they received a report of an injured worker receiving delayed aid due to lack of Medical Kit accessibility. This is dangerous and can violate OSHA, a law that regulates workplace safety. They needed a way for workers to easily report safety threats or request help in case of injury.

The Solution

The client deployed the LiveSafe Mobile App so that workers could anonymously submit tips. They received over ten tips highlighting life-threatening safety concerns such as slip hazards, falling materials, and negligent equipment placement.

The Result

LiveSafe tip submissions informed the manufacturing client of production line safety concerns, helping them improve employee safety and prevent compliance regulation violations.

A single OSHA violation can cost up to $13,494, and a willful or repeat violation can cost up to $134,937 per violation.
